How to receive text messages on two phones android and iphone.

If you've been having trouble receiving text messages from iPhone users, Apple's iMessage is probably at fault-especially if you recently switched from iPhone to Android, or something else. This problem most often occurs when you switch from an iPhone to another type of smartphone, but it could happen to anyone. Even if you've never owned an iPhone, if you have a new phone number, that phone number could have been registered with Apple's iMessage by its previous owner. Why Apple's iMessage Gets In the Way RELATED: Why Are Some iMessages Green and Some Blue on My iPhone? Apple's Messages app tries to be smart. If an iPhone user opens the Messages app and tries to send a text message to a phone number, you might assume the iPhone would just send a text message. But it won't. Instead, the Messages app will check with Apple to see if the phone number is registered with Apple's iMessage service. If it is, the Messages app won't send a standard SMS message-it'll send an iMessage instead. iPhone users don't choose to send messages via iMessage or standard SMS-it's automatic. The only indication for an iPhone user is that messages sent via iMessage are blue, while messages sent via standard SMS are green. This is designed to be a seamless experience between iPhone users. If you message someone and they're using an iPhone, the message will be sent via iMessage. If someone isn't using an iPhone, Messages will send it as a standard text message. People Who Switch to Android Fall Through the Cracks But it's possible for this system to cause problems. This will most commonly occur if you've switched from an iPhone to an Android phone or another type of phone. Even after you leave your iPhone, your phone number will still be in Apple's system and registered with iMessage. So, when an iPhone user attempts to text you, their Messages app will send an iMessage, which will just sit on Apple's server-and never make it to you, since you no longer have an iPhone. Their Messages app will say the message was sent successfully-Apple's iMessage server received it-so they'll have no clue you didn't get it. Text messages sent to you from iPhones will just appear to vanish into the void. This could potentially also occur even if you've never had an iPhone. For example, if your phone company gives you a new phone number that was previously used by an iPhone, it could conceivably still be registered with iMessage. How Deregister Your Phone Number and Disable iMessage To solve this problem, you just need to deregister your phone number from Apple's iMessage service. Apple began offering a tool to do this after it faced the threat of lawsuits. To deregister your phone number from iMessage, head to Apple's Deregister and Turn Off iMessage website and enter your phone number. Apple will send a text message to your phone number. Enter the confirmation code from the text message on the web page to confirm you have access to that phone number. Apple will then remove your phone number from the iMessage system. When an iPhone user attempts to text you, the Messages app will see that you're not registered in iMessage anymore, and will automatically send you a standard SMS message. According to Apple, it may take a few hours for this to take effect. If you still have your old iPhone, you can also do this from the iPhone. If you've used the above online tool, you don't need to do this–this is just an alternative method. Insert your SIM card into the iPhone and open the "Settings" app. Tap the "Messages" category and disable the "iMessage" slider at the top of the screen. Go back, tap the "Facetime" category, and disable the "Facetime" slider. You can now remove your SIM card from your iPhone, insert it into your new phone, and everything should work. This may be common knowledge in some circles–especially after all the controversy and lawsuits a few years ago–but it's a problem many people bump into. Unfortunately, people may be entirely unaware of this problem with iMessage when they switch. They may also not have connected the dots and realized that the people they can't receive texts from are iPhone users. But, once you've identified the problem, it's thankfully pretty easy to fix with Apple's website. Image Credit: Karlis Dambrans on Flickr Even with the rise of online messengers that you can use to chat with someone for free, sending a text message remains one of the fastest ways to reach someone on their phone. What if the text you want to send isn't urgent, and you intentionally want to postpone sending it? What if you don't want to forget wishing someone a happy birthday the next day or need to reach someone in a different time zone and don't want to wake them up with a text? On Android, there are several ways to schedule a text message to be sent at a later time or date. Learn how to use your native Messages app, Google Messages, or a third-party app to schedule a text message to be sent in the future. How to Schedule a Text Message on Android in Your Native Messages App So you wrote a text but decided to send it another time. The good news is, you can schedule and send your message later, no matter what Android device you have. However, depending on your model, you'll either need to use a third-party app to do it or not. For example, if you have a Samsung phone, you can use your native Messages app called Samsung Messages to schedule your texts. To do that, follow the steps below. Open the Samsung Messages app, find the contact you want to message, and write down your text.Select the arrow icon on the left side of the text, then select the plus icon to reveal additional options. From the options, select Schedule message. Choose the time and date when you want your message to be sent. Select Done to confirm. To finish scheduling your message, select Send. How to Schedule a Text Message Using Google Messages On many models of Android smartphones, Google Messages is the native Messages app. If that's the case, scheduling text messages on Android becomes even easier. To schedule a text message in Google Messages, follow the steps below. Open Google Messages and type your text.Hold down the Send button until the Scheduled send option appears and select it. Pick a date and time when you want the text to be sent. Select Send to confirm. The button will now display a little clock icon that means your message is scheduled. What to Do if You Can't Schedule a Text in Google Messages If you opened your native Messages app and didn't find the Scheduled send option, it could mean one of the two things. Your native Messages app is different from Google Messages, in which case you can simply download and install Google Messages to make it work. Alternatively, the feature may not have rolled out for you yet. You can either wait for the update to reach you or find Google Messages on the Play Store and join the beta program on the product page. The beta version of the app will include the feature. Use Third-Party Apps to Schedule a Text Message on Android You can also use a third-party app to be able to schedule your text messages as well as use other workarounds. Use Pulse SMS to Postpone Your Text Messages If you don't like using Google Messages, Pulse SMS is a good alternative. The Pulse SMS logo even looks similar to that of Google Messages. Naturally, the process of scheduling a text in Pulse SMS mimics Google Messages too. After you download and install the app, open it and select the plus icon in the bottom-right corner of the app. Choose the contact that you want to send a text to. Then, hold down the Send button on the right until you see the option to schedule the text. Select the date and time when you want your message sent and select OK. Write down your message and select Save. Pulse SMS will send it on a day and time that you chose. Schedule Your Texts Using Do It Later Do It Later sounds like an app for procrastination, but it's an app for automating your messages. Ju cocixafe baleleda mekizacu yafave famodamipaxov.pdf image by Elzbieta Sekowska from Fotolia.com If you need to get in touch with a Verizon user via text message and you don't have a text-capable cell phone, you have options. There are three ways to send a free text message from a computer to a Verizon user without the need of a text-messaging account. If you have Internet access and an email or AOL Instant Messenger account, a text message can be composed and sent via your computer keyboard. Alternatively, a text message can be sent from Verizon's web-based text messaging system. Open your web browser. The Verizon online text messaging tools are located at text.vzw.com. Address the text message. In the "Send To" field, type the 10-digit number, including area code, of the user you want to text. You can send the same message to a total of 10 users simultaneously. If you want, you can include your name and callback number on the text. Compose the message. Remember that text messages sent via the Verizon website are limited to 140 characters. If longer, you must split the text into multiple messages. Send the message. Click the "Send" button in your web browser. The text will be sent on your behalf. Open your email client. Alternatively, if you use web-based email, log in to your account. Start a new message. Click on the "New" or "Compose" button, depending on your email client, to start a new message. Address the message. In the "To" field, insert the ten-digit phone number you want to text in the following format: phonenumber@vtext.com. Compose your message. Your text message is limited to 140 characters, so plan accordingly when composing the message. Send the message. Once your message is composed in the email client, click the "Send" button to send it. From your end, it is sent and handled like any other email. Launch and log in to AOL Instant Messenger. Start a new instant message. Click the "People" menu at the top of the screen and select "Send Instant Message." Address the message. In the "To" field of the message, insert the Verizon user's cell phone number, preceded by country code (+1 for the United States). For example, if you were texting (212) 555-1212, enter +12125551212 in the "To" field. Compose the message. Type in the same composition area as used when sending a regular AOL instant message. Send the message. Click the "Send" button in the lower-right hand corner of the window to send the message to the Verizon user.
